

HANNA-BARBERA'S

FUN TIME

EVERY FRIDAY • NO 21

FEATURING: YOGI BEAR, THE FLINTSTONES, BOSS CAT, HUCKLEBERRY HOUND, MAGILLA GORILLA, QUICK DRAW McGRAW, PIXIE, DIXIE AND MR. JINX.

The Tales of YOGI BEAR

Incorporating

HANNA-BARBERA
YOGI

4p

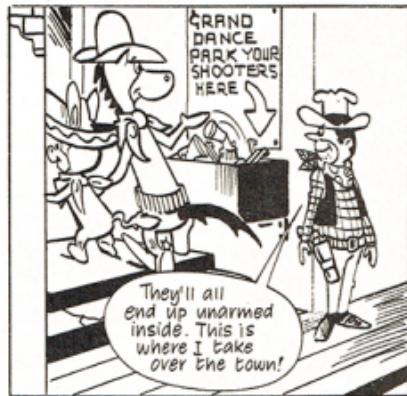

Continued on back page.....

EXCITING TIMES WITH QUICK DRAW McGRAW

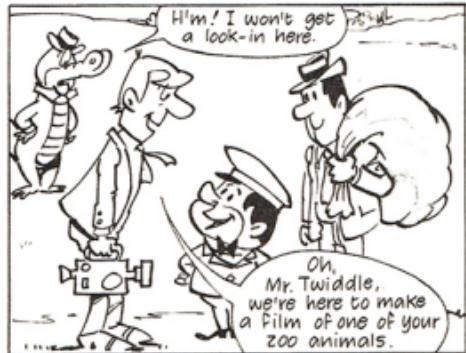

ON THE FIDDLE

MEET

WALLY GATOR

and
MR. TWIDDLE

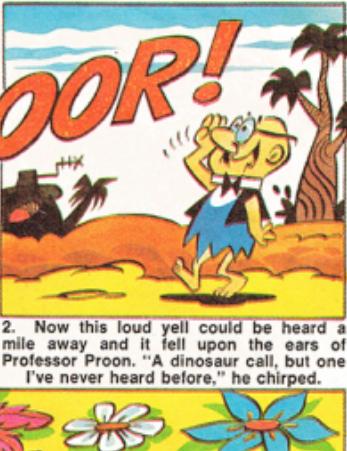

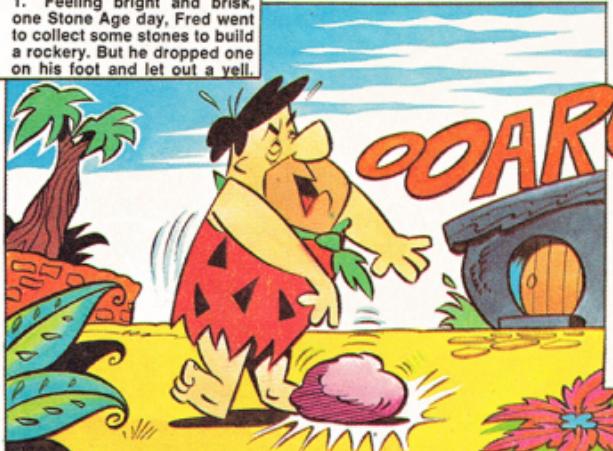

Meet The FLINTSTONES

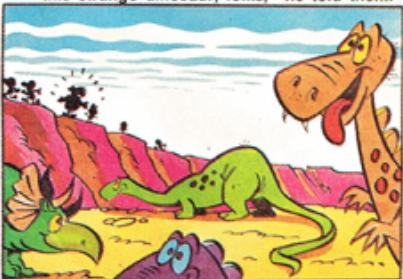

1. Feeling bright and brisk, one Stone Age day, Fred went to collect some stones to build a rockery. But he dropped one on his foot and let out a yell.

2. Now this loud yell could be heard a mile away and it fell upon the ears of Professor Proon. "A dinosaur call, but one I've never heard before," he chirped.

3. He was so excited that he called a meeting of the Nature Society. "Tomorrow we will go to seek out this strange dinosaur, folks," he told them.

5. So next day, Fred and Pebbles went on the Nature ramble. They saw all sorts of dinosaurs, but they were the usual ones they'd seen before. "I don't see a rare one among them," said Fred.

4. "What a splendid idea, Fred," said Wilma. "You must take little Pebbles along with you." Now Fred wasn't too keen because of his sore toe, but he said he'd have a go.

6. Then little Pebbles piped up with a bright idea. "The strange dinosaur must have seen us coming and has perhaps hidden in that cave," she said. "My Daddy's very brave, so he won't be too scared to go in." This shook Fred a bit.

7. If he was going to see any dinosaurs that he'd never seen before, Fred thought he'd rather see them from a long way off. "What a fearless fellow," said the folks.

8. It was a bit gloomy inside the cave and when Fred hit his sore toe on a rock, he let out another high-powered yell.

9. "That's the very sound," whooped Professor Proon. "Come with me, my Nature-ramblers. We are about to see a rare specimen of the dinosaur tribe."

10. Inside, they came upon Fred. "Oh, do tell us," said the professor. "What kind of weird dinosaur did you see?" "I never saw one at all," yapped Fred. "I gave my bad toe a bonk, and it made me yell."

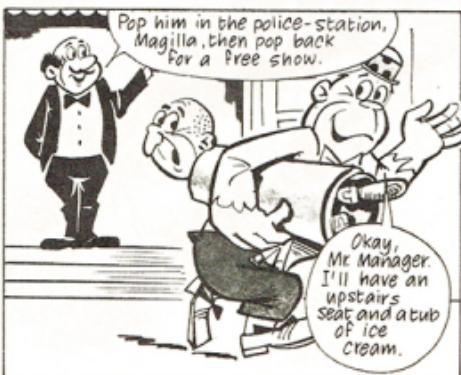

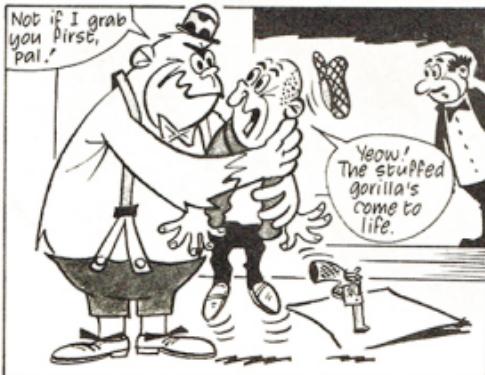

11. The professor and his Nature-ramblers weren't very amused at having come all that way for nothing. "My man, you have wasted our time and trouble," sniffed old Proon. Just then, little Pebbles saw something rather exciting.

12. There were lots of dinosaurs, the likes of which they had never seen before—painted on the walls by other ancient folk from long ago. "A super find," said the professor. "And well worth shouting about."

ADVENTURES OF MAGILLA GORILLA

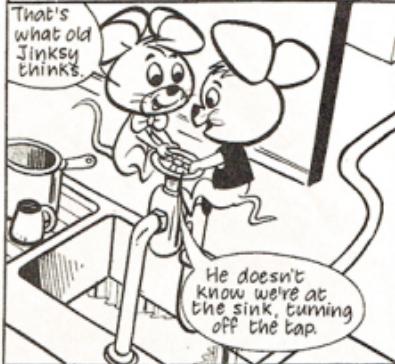

Pixie Dixie and Mr Jinks

What a Wash-out

1. There's no doubt about the fact that Mr. Jinks, the champion mouse-chaser, usually finds himself in hot water when he chases Pixie and Dixie, so one day he decided to pour cold water on all their artful schemes.

2. His idea was to wash out all the mouse-holes in the house with the aid of a long hose-pipe connected to the kitchen tap. "That's stretching things too far," said Pixie to Dixie, turning off the tap. "We don't want a tidal wave in our parlour."

3. Mr. Jinks was a bit puzzled when nothing came out of the end of the hose-pipe. "Er—well, er, let me see now," he said to himself. "By all the laws of Nature, the fluid should flow out in large heaps."

4. He smartly about-turned and had a glance into the kitchen. "So that's it, is it, you miserable meees?" he shouted. "You're spoiling it all. If you don't turn on that tap I'll bash you to bits."

5. "Better do what the kind gent says, Dixie," smiled Pixie. "He'll be in a twist if we don't give the tap a twist." Now it so happened that the lady of the house had just sat down with a cup of tea and—swoosh! She collected the whole lot.

6. There was one thing she just hated, and that was watered-down tea. "Out, cat!" she shrieked, applying the order of the boot to Mr. Jinks. What a washout it turned out to be.

BoSS CaT

and his Alley Gang

Hey, Boss Cat! What d'you think you're at?

Aw, just showing the gang a clean pair of wheels, Dibble.

Oops-daisy!

Gee! Mind that wall, Officer Dibble!

What kept you, Benny?

I bumped into Dibble, that's why.

Here comes Dibble now.

He'll need to get his skates on to catch us. Beat it, fellers!

I'll catch those horrible cats. I'll get me a pair of roller skates and beat them at their own game.

It's the PETER POTAMUS SHOW!

Hello, folks! This week
the King is hard-up,
but is making plans
to raise money.

I believe there's a coach-load of tourists arriving today, colonel.

We'll charge them double to see the Crown jewels.

A money-making scheme, your Majesty!

We'll trap the tourists first, Breezly--- and here they come.

Now to start our cash-collecting plan.

Yeah, they'll go for this!

Here you are, folks. Get your refreshments now.

All special and prepared in the palace.

VIEWS OF THE CASTLE

HAMBURGERS & TEA

And line up here for your royal picture postcards, people!

HUCKLEBERRY HOUND

ACTING THE GOAT

1. People get short-tempered when they have to cut long grass. "It will take a lot of moans before I get this mown," said Mr. Ka-Pow. "It gets my goat, Huck."

I know it's hard work giving the grass its first cut of the year, but keep at it.
Mr. Ka-Pow.

Puff, pant! You ought to buy a goat to keep it short.

A goat would be a good idea, and there's a likely-looking one.

2. Now it sounded a good wheeze to grab a goat to chew the grass short, so Huck popped off to the pet shop. "Ah, that appears to be a splendid specimen for sale," he smiled.

Listen carefully. Never say BUT in front of him. Every time he hears the word BUT he butts.

3. The shopman had words of advice. "Never let him hear you say BUT, or he'll butt!"

He's a fine-looking goat, Huck. But does he BUTT?

4. Huck hoped that everyone at home would be careful about this, but the first words said by Mr. Ka-Pow started a real load of trouble.

5. Biff! Poor old Huck arrived in the garden without using the gate. "Don't say BUT," he cried.

Hello, sir. I've brought along your new water-BUTT

Oh, no!

Funny fellow! Did he buy it for the fun of smashing it?

6. The plan seemed to be working peacefully, and the goat was gobbling up the long grass, when a delivery gent toddled up. He'd brought a water-butt and said so in a large, loud voice.

7. That did it, of course. The billy-goat heard the hated word and went into action at once. The head-bumpers caught our Huck bending, sending him flying through the air to land somewhat heavily on the water-butt. Which did it no good at all, folks!

Not a word, fellows --- it's too risky. Absolute silence in front of the goat, remember!

8. Huck was now short of one brand-new water-butt, but he didn't mention it aloud. "Nobody is to say a word in front of that goat," he warned the other. "From now on our lips will be sealed. Only then will we be safe."

I find this silence rather boring. Let's have some lively music.

9. It's all very boring when you can't speak, and your mouth feels all buttoned-up, so Mr. Ka-Pow got out a record-player. "Some music won't hurt," he said. "They say that music soothes a savage beast."

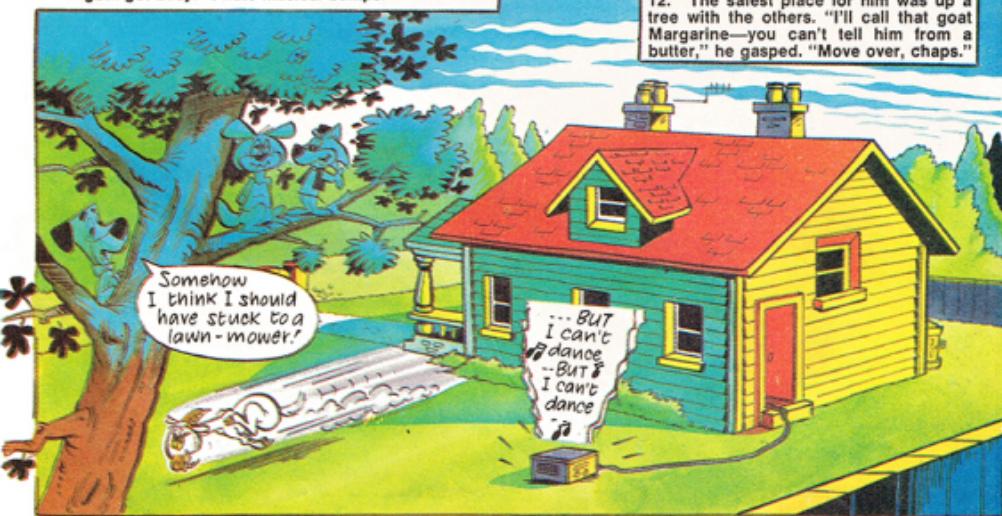

10. When the tune began, it was Huckleberry who felt off song right away, because there was a BUT word in it. "Ouch!" he gasped, as the goat got busy. "I hate musical bumps."

11. That record turned out to be the top of the flops when the needle got stuck in the wrong groove. As you see, this wasn't very groovy for Huck.

The safest place for him was up a tree with the others. "I'll call that goat Margarine—you can't tell him from a butter," he gasped. "Move over, chaps."

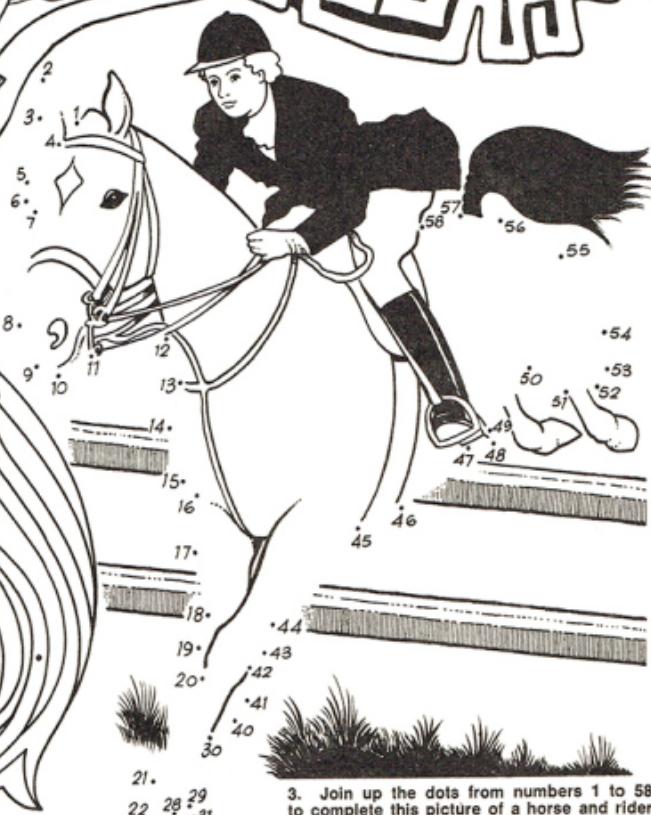

YOGI'S PUZZLES

1. Ride a cock-horse to Banbury Cross . . . that's what the nursery rhyme says. But which is the right path through the maze to reach Banbury Cross?

2. Hidden in this mystery picture is a musical instrument. To find out what it is, take a pencil and shade in all the spaces marked with a black dot.

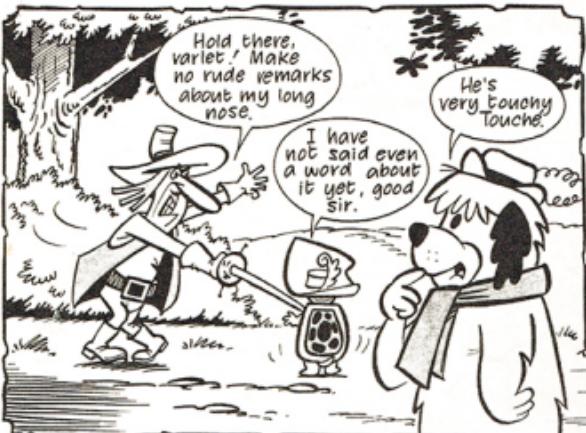

21. 28. 29.
22. 27. 31. 39.
23. 26. 32. 38. 37.
24. 25. 33. 36. 35.
34. 35.

3. Join up the dots from numbers 1 to 58 to complete this picture of a horse and rider going over the jumps. Then colour it with paints or coloured pencils.

Answer:

2. A hunting horn.

Touché Turtle

Continued from page 1.....

